

In a normal chat with somebody you can scroll up in the textfield and see the last x messages.

If you keep scrolling up, the chat history gets loaded continuously and the blue-grey bar with the search box and the date picker appears. The whole bar can be removed by clicking the cross on the right side. This bar is overlayed – the text scrolls underneath – and dissappears when scrolling down to the bottom.

When a new message comes in it doesn't scroll down.

The date picker allows you to jump around in the chat history by selecting a date.

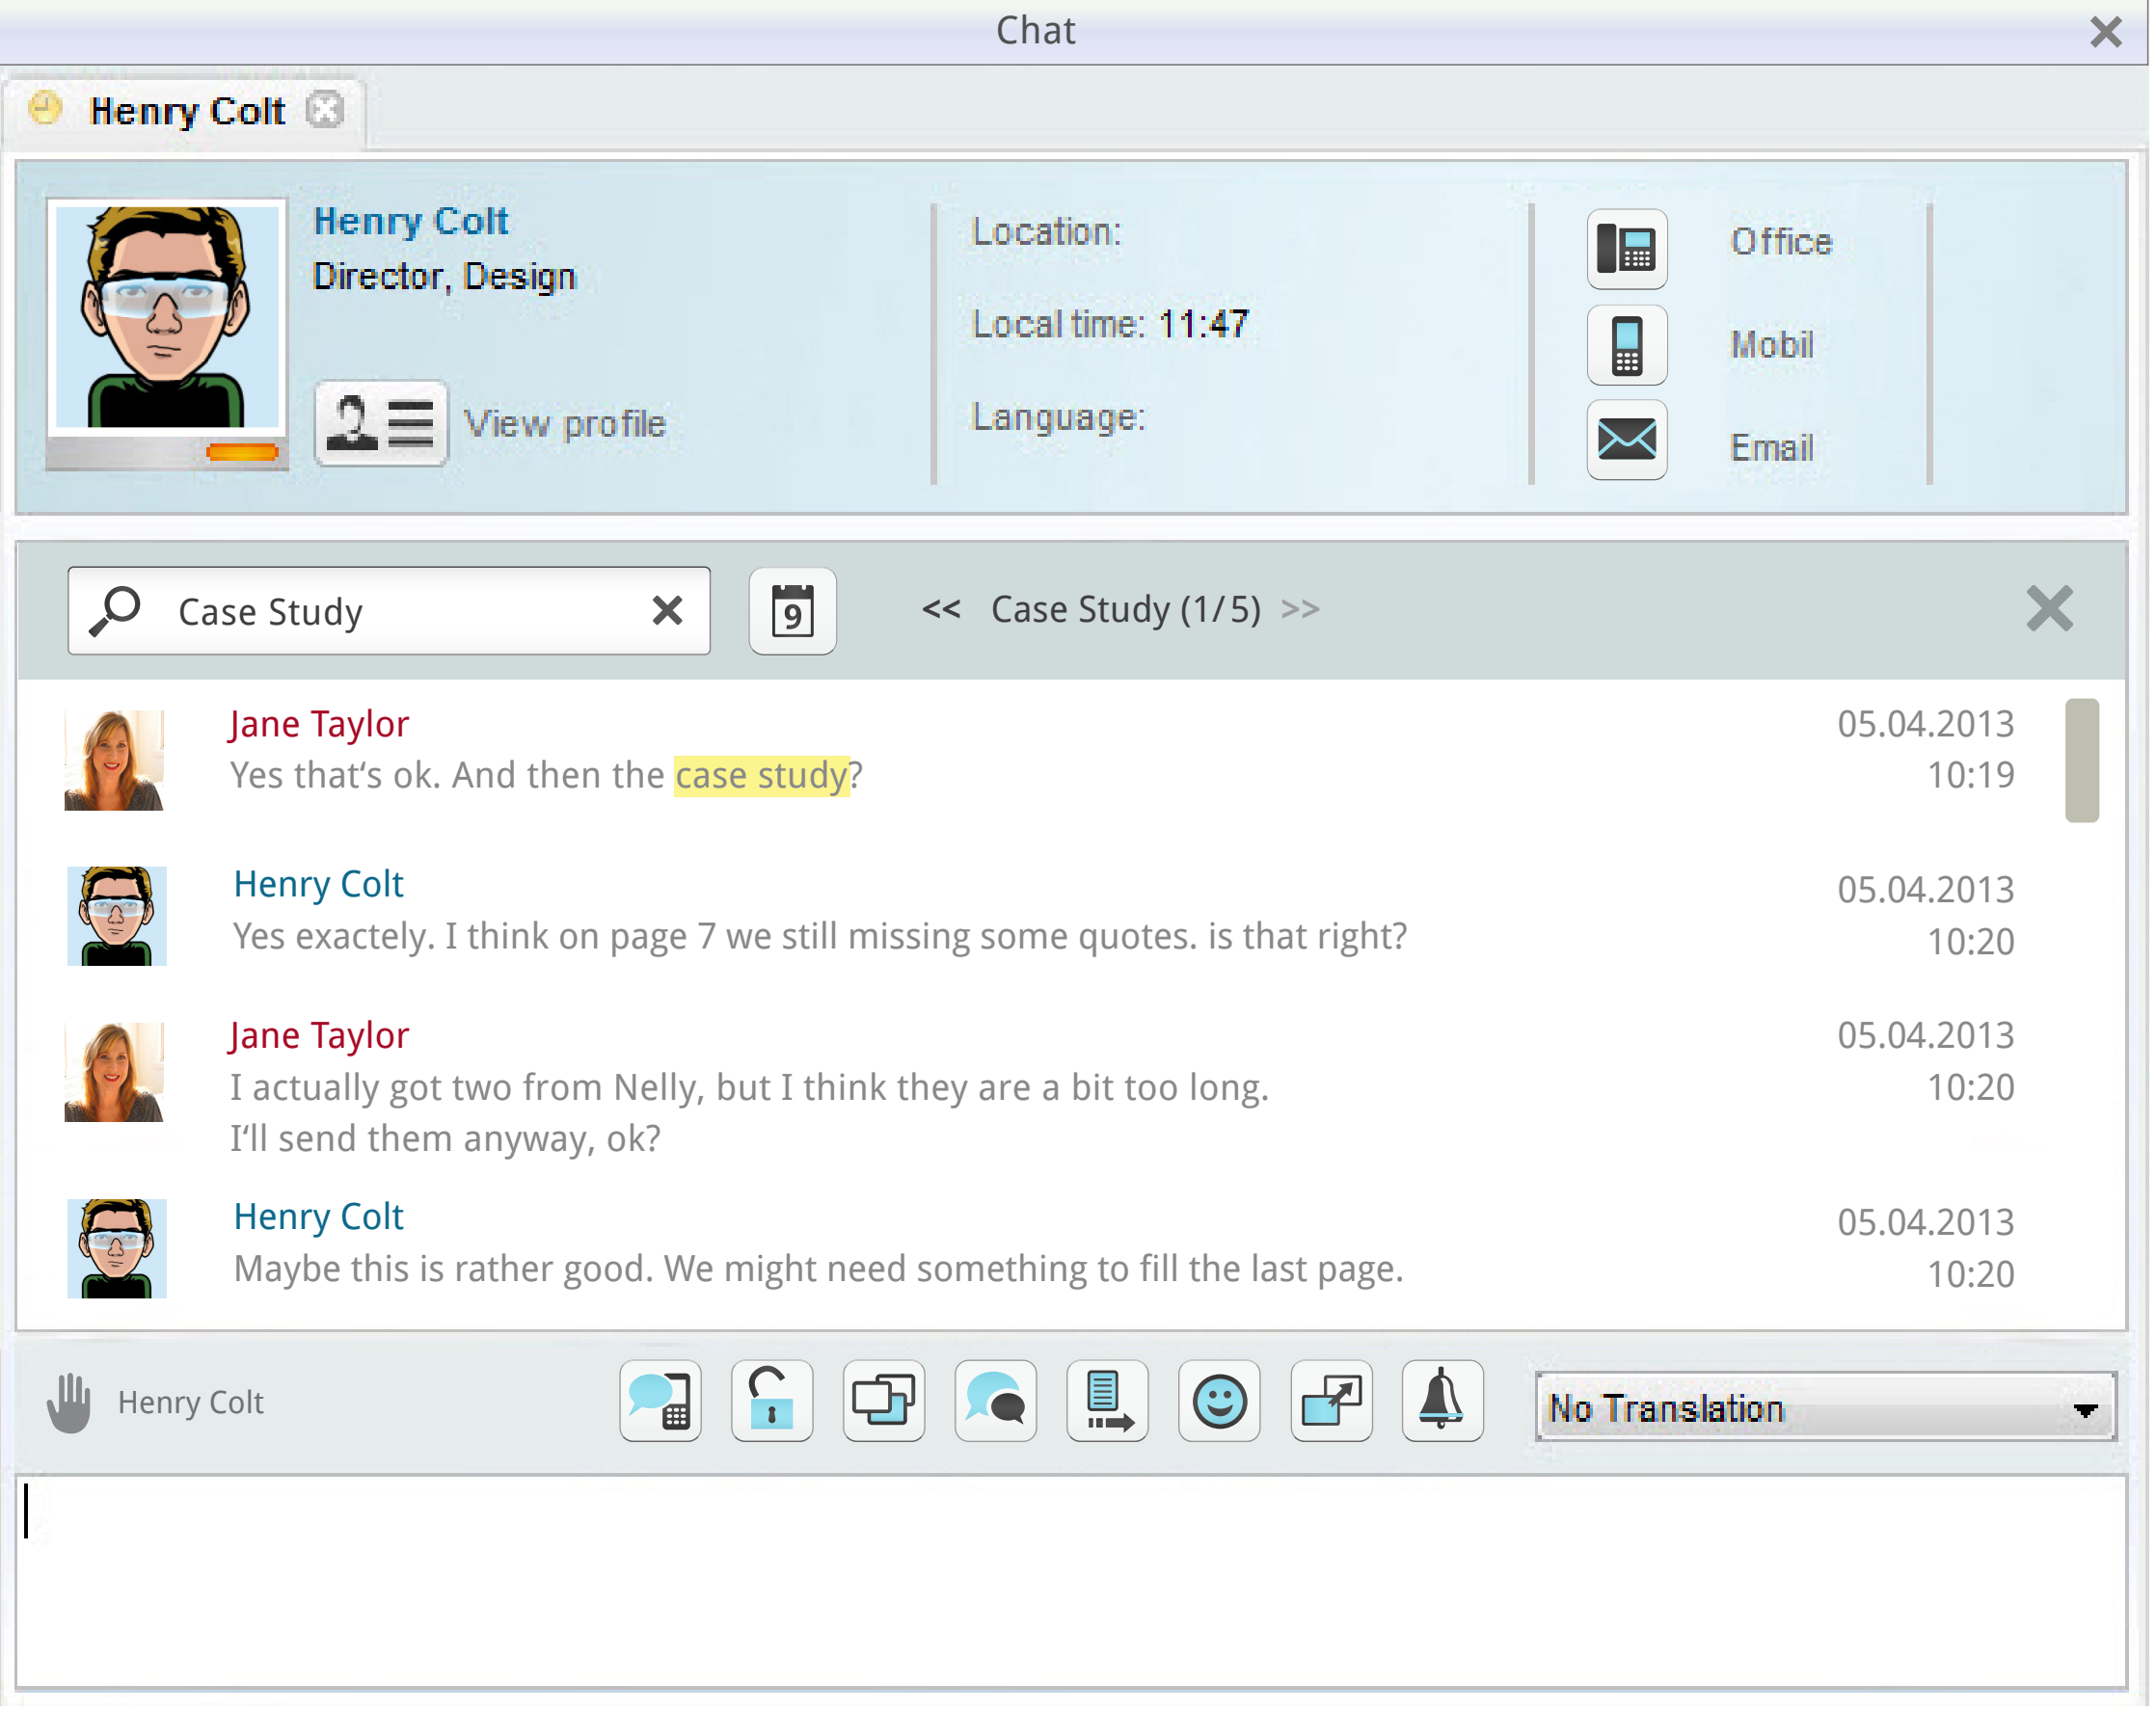

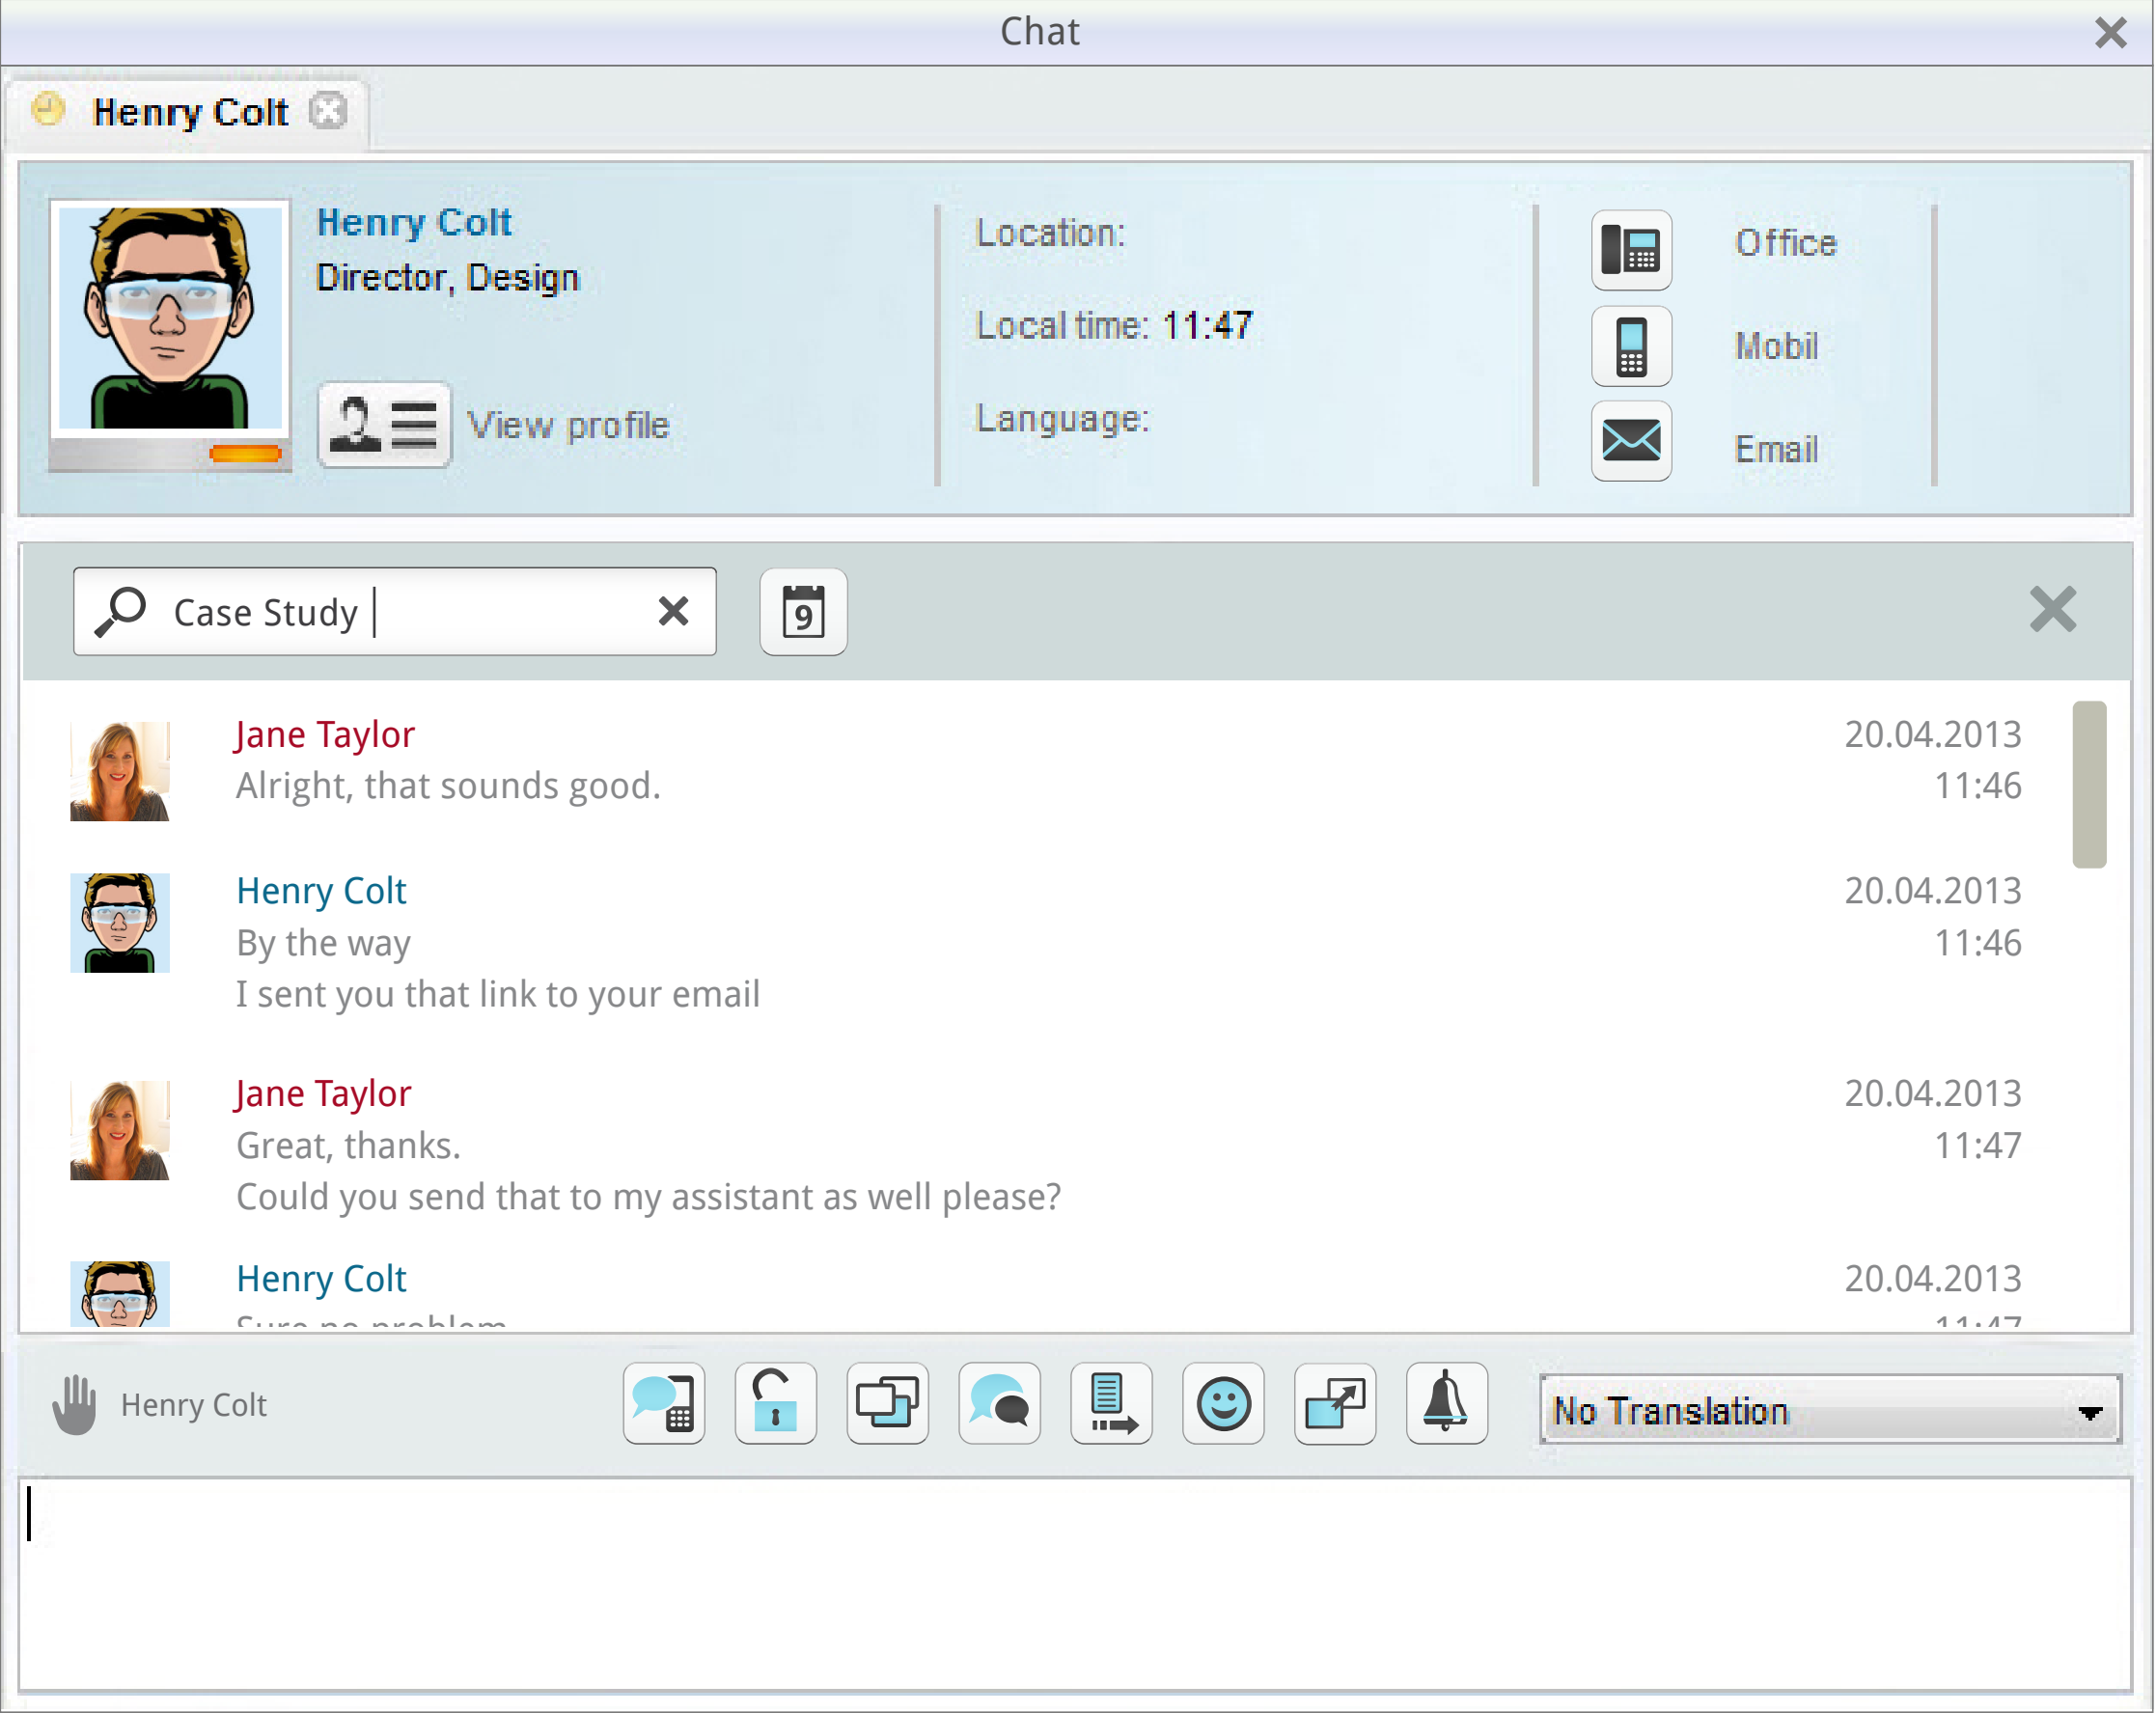

Clicking the date picker button opens the calendar with the current month and all the available dates (future dates are greyed out).

With << and >> you can change the month. Clicking on a date, the corresponding chat history appears in the text field underneath.

You can click several dates to jump around in history. To close the calendar you click the cross or the button again. The date picker closes automatically when scrolling down to the bottom.

When you search for a certain word or a combination in chat history, the most recent chat string will appear.

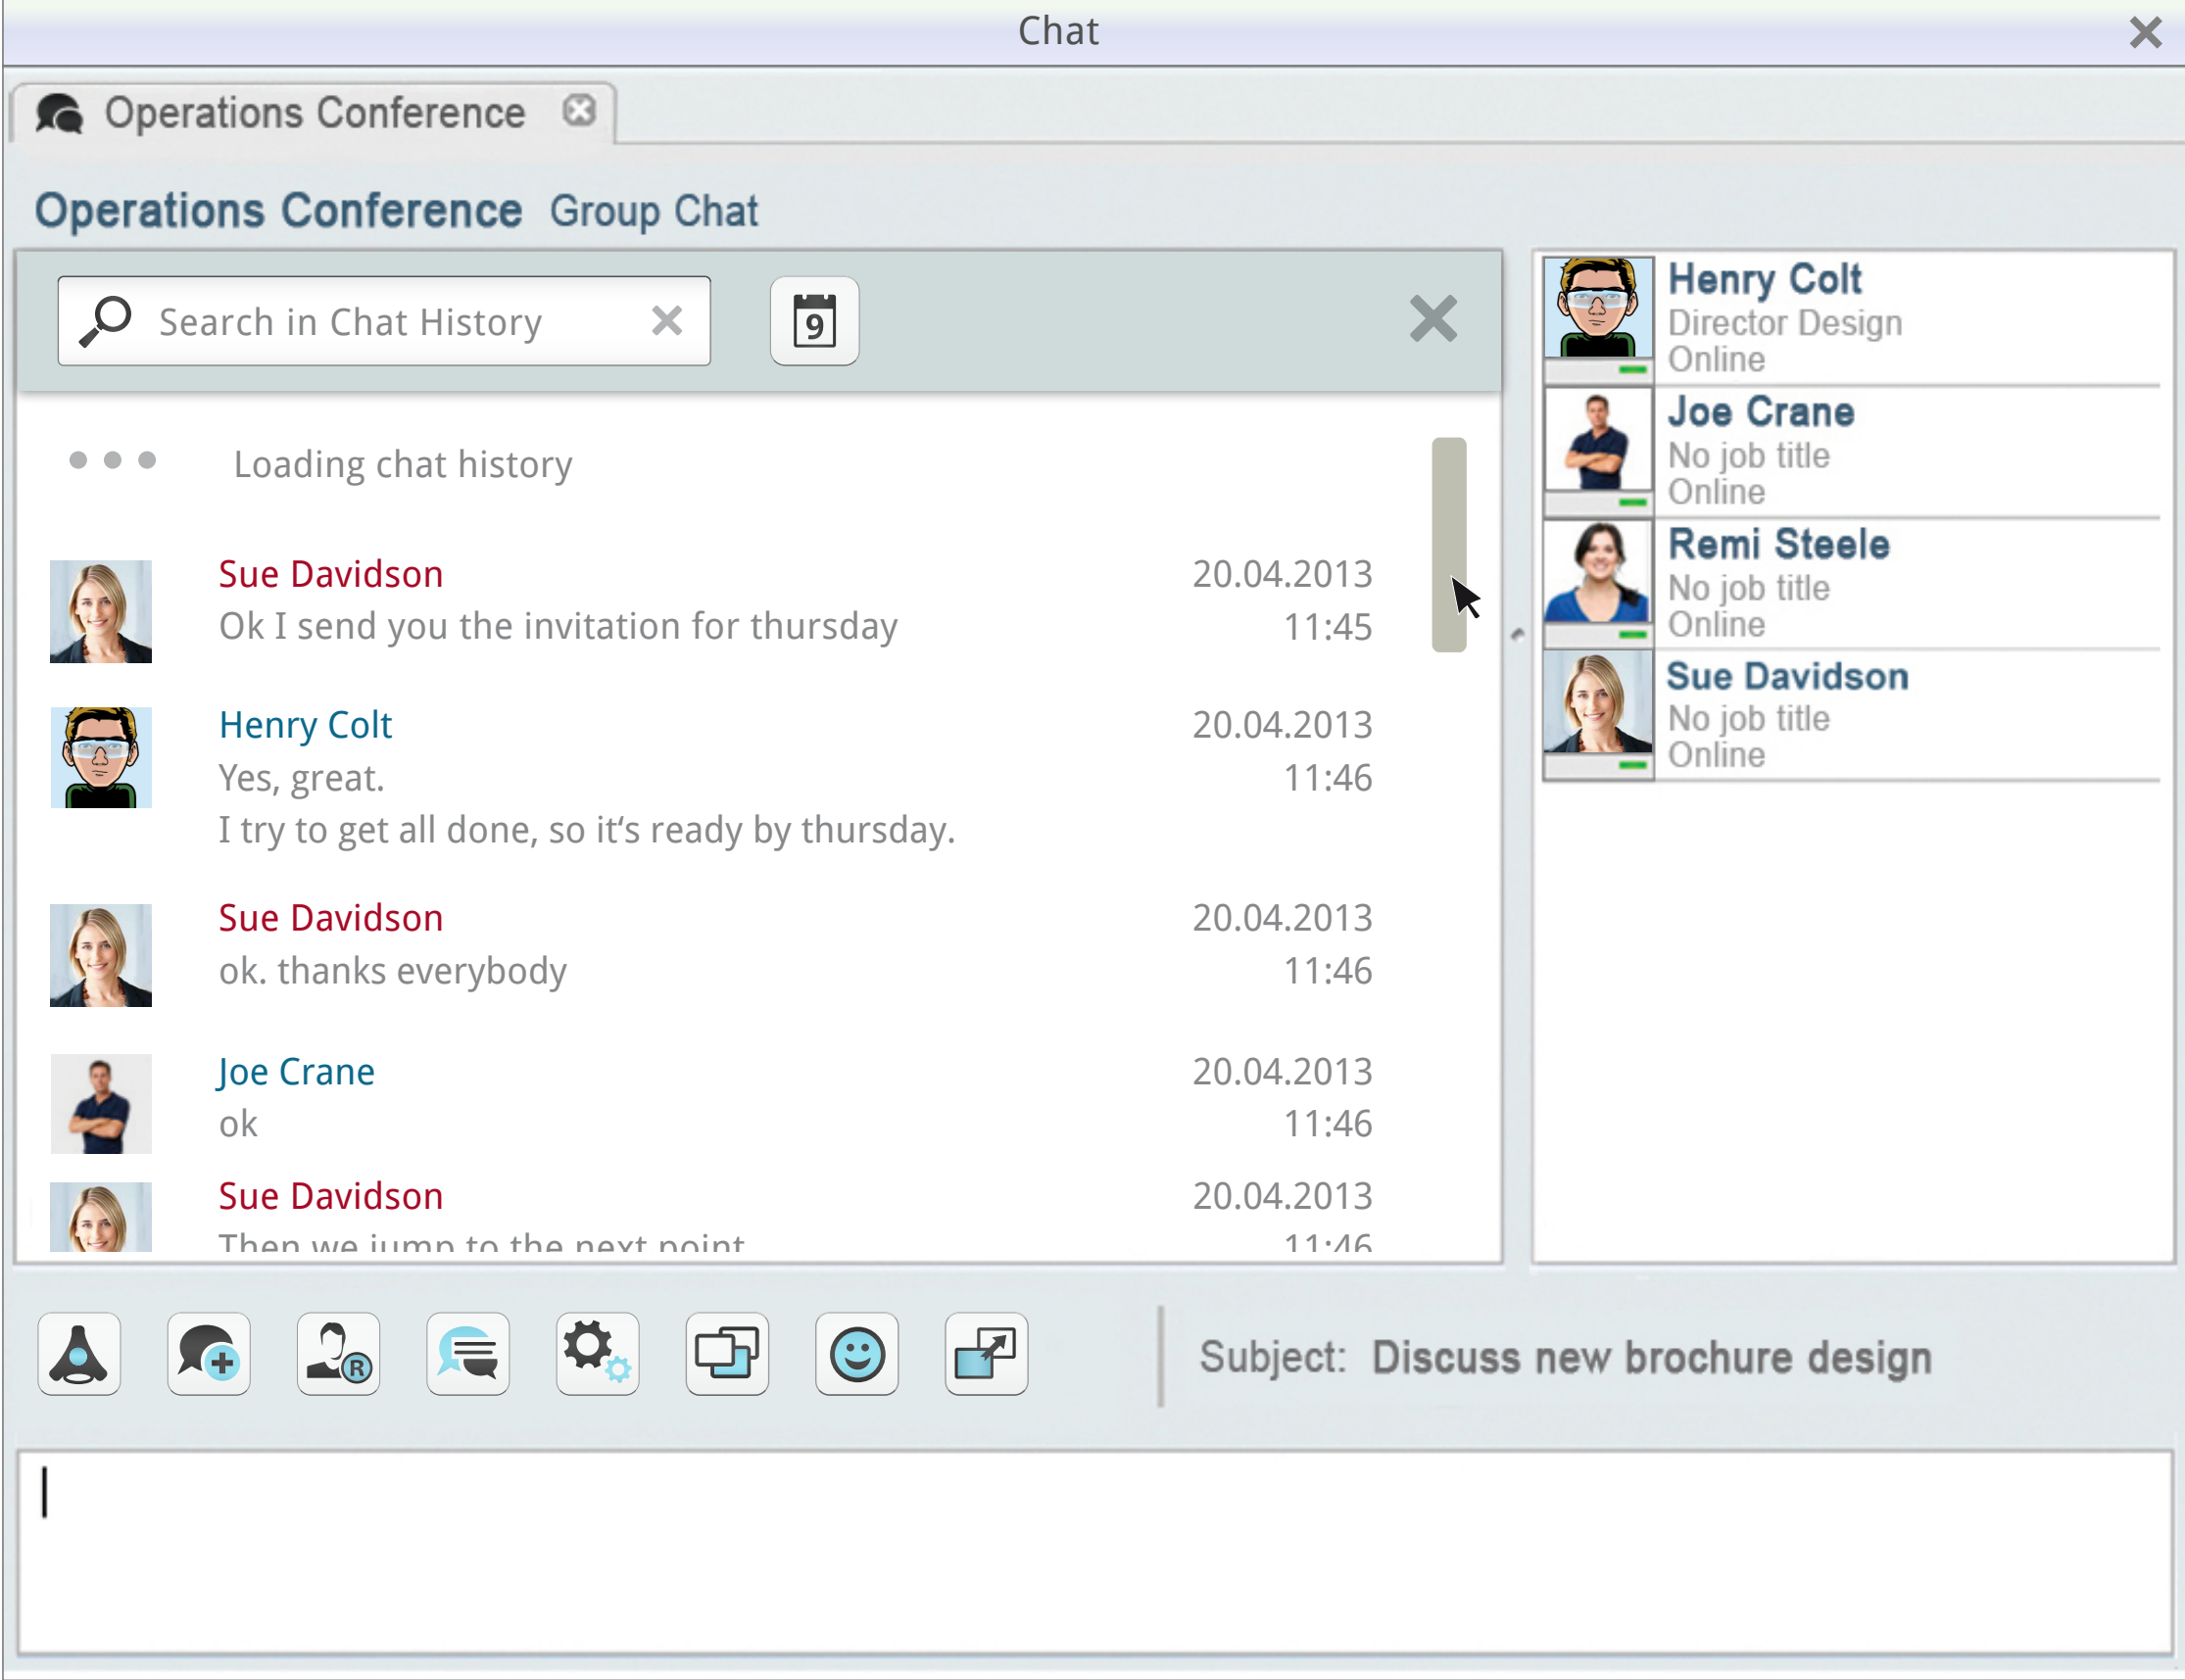

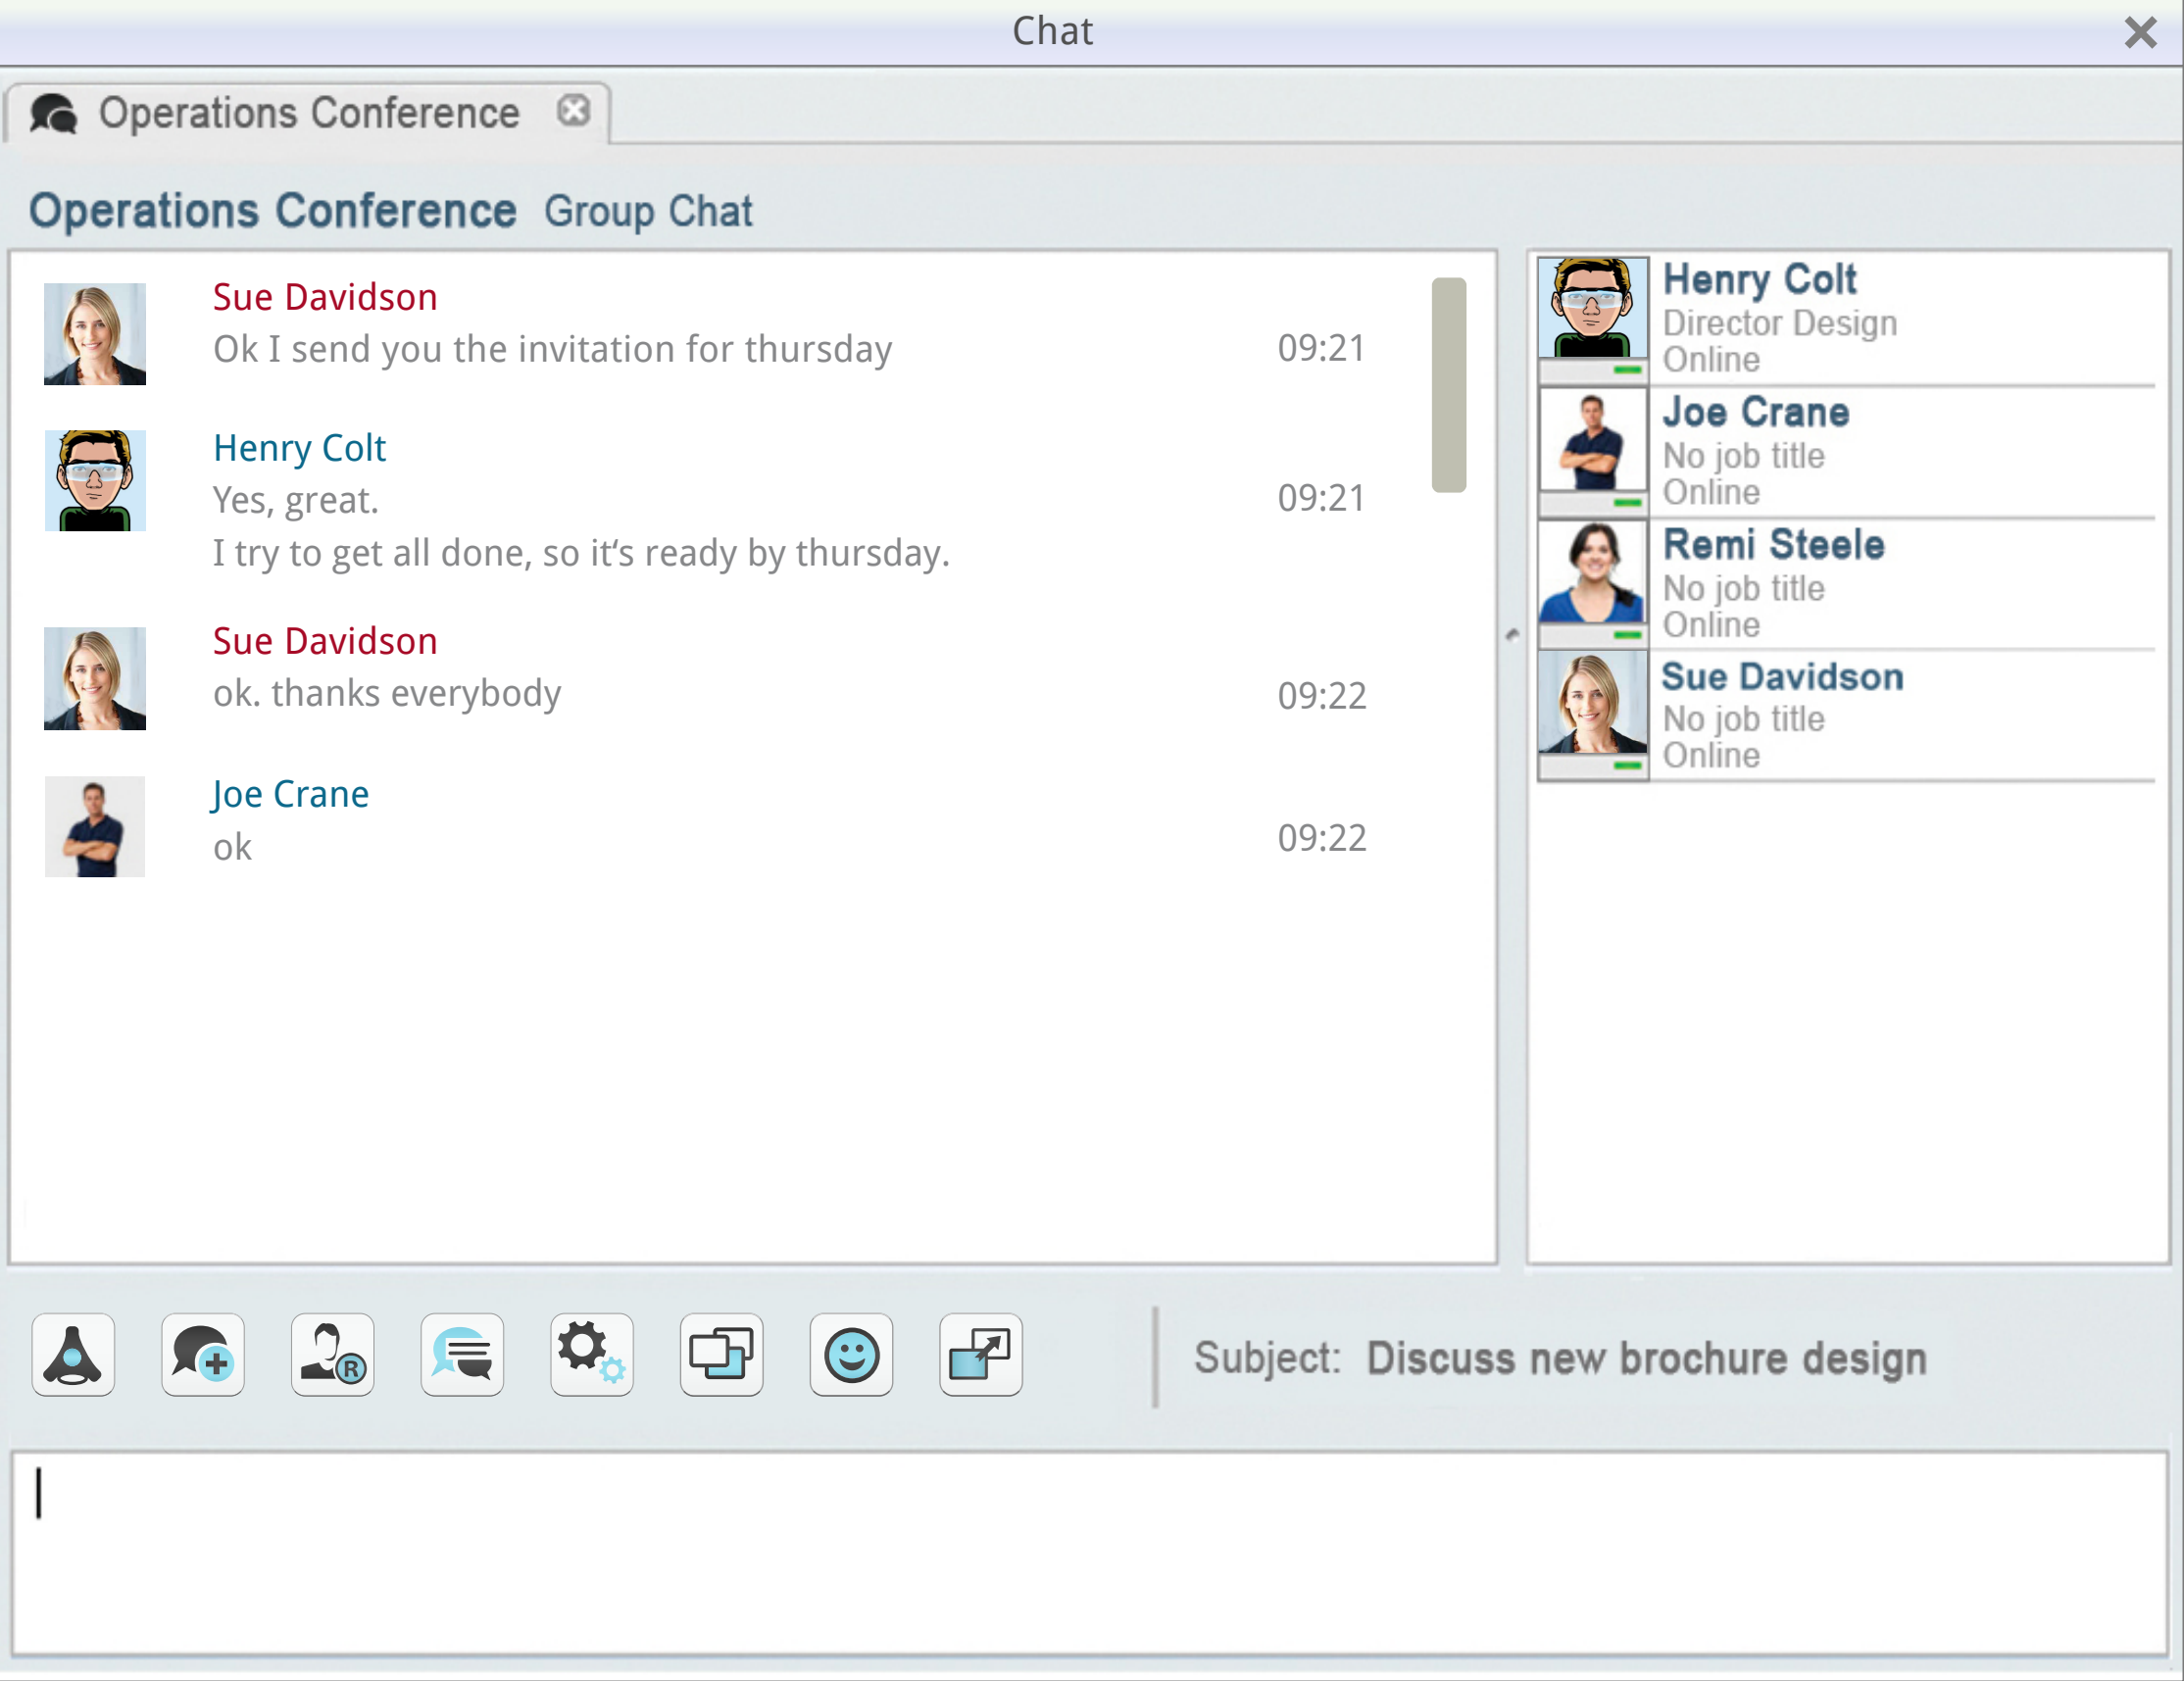

In the bar the word and the number of results in brackets allows clicking back << and forward >>.

The search word is highlighted in the text.

The search can be canceled by clicking the cross in the search box.
